GSX and C² Partner to Win SEC Contract

Alexandria, Va. – Global Skills X-Change (GSX), along with C² Technologies, has been selected by the Securities Exchange Commission (SEC) to develop and implement a validated certification program for their Office of Compliance, Inspections, and Examinations (OCIE).

The project will focus on the continuing need for SEC professionals to possess the knowledge, skills, training, credentialing, and experience necessary to carry out the complex SEC mission to “invest in employee development to achieve organizational excellence.”

“We are excited to have the opportunity to team with C2 Technologies to address a requirement of this significance,” said GSX President and CEO, Dave Wilcox. “In this and other national priorities we have been asked to support programs that have both nation-wide and a far reaching Impact for the country.”

GSX, an Alexandria based firm, designs strategies and processes for the development and deployment of competency models and related credentialing. C² Technologies is a business specializing in human performance improvement within the Federal Government and is headquartered in Vienna, Virginia.

The combined technical expertise of these two firms is being employed to address the impact on human performance of the increasing complexities associated with the ever-changing securities industry while ensuring adequate investor protection.
